study of 624,535 patients from the National Cancer Institute's Surveillance, Epidemiology and End
Results (SEER) Program.
Rationale There is a concern that patients with head and neck cancer may be at an increased risk of developing second primary lung cancer.

This study uses a large, population-based database to evaluate the risk of developing non-Hodgkin's lymphoma (NHL) in patients with primary lung cancer. Methods and materials The SEER Program's Program Data Collection Database (1973-2006) was used to identify 624,535 individuals with primary lung cancer. The incidence of NHL in these individuals was compared to that in the general population. Data were analyzed by race, sex, age group, histologic subtype, and stage at diagnosis. Results Overall, there were 38,094 individuals with NHL and 624,535 without NHL. The incidence of NHL among individuals with primary lung cancer was 3.32/100,000 person-years (95% confidence interval [CI] 3.25-3.40), and among individuals without primary lung cancer was 5.34/100,000 person-years (95% CI

---

5.25-5.43). The age-adjusted hazard ratio (HR) was 0.51 (95% CI 0.51-0.52). The incidence of NHL was similar in both males and females. When the analysis was restricted to those aged 20 to 59 years, the incidence of NHL in those with primary lung cancer was 1
