"The RPG elements are really well balanced out with the action elements and the battle system is so simple and yet fun to play. Additionally, due to its simplicity, there are multiple tactics that can be used to solve puzzles and escape from certain death. It is definitely a game that shouldn't be missed." - DuskiAP.com

"The game starts off with a big bang... a good 20-30 minutes if you can stick with it, but the first 20 or so battles will feel a little fudged... but once you get going it can't stop." - Arcanegamer.com

"The game has a unique narrative, which is only topped by the presentation, but it doesn't have that decisive thing, that one big thing that makes a game a classic, an enduring classic." - Techraian

The distribution and levels of glutamate-like immunoreactivity (GLIR) in the dorsal root ganglia and spinal cord were examined in rats following intradural injections of either the neuroexcitotoxin quisqualic acid (QA), the bacterial endotoxin lipopolysaccharide (LPS), saline, or heat-killed bacteria. Histological studies were performed to determine the locations of the injections and to characterize the distribution of GLIR in the dorsal root ganglia and spinal cord. GLIR was first observed within the dorsal root ganglia and spinal cord 6 h after a QA injection; the intensity and distribution of GLIR increased from 12 h to 5 days after the QA injection. The density of GLIR-positive fibers within the dorsal root ganglia increased with time after QA injection, but the concentration of GLIR in the dorsal root ganglia was not significantly different from that in the controls. GLIR was observed in the superficial layers of the dorsal horn of the spinal cord 5
